MAMMOTH CAVE AND THE CAVE HOTEL.-The hotel at Mammoth Cave, always a commodious and tasteful establishment, has, under the auspices of its present excellent proprietor, Mr. L. J. Proctor, been thoroughly repaired and refurnished, and is now thrown open for the reception of visitors on a scale of accommodation far more luxnrious than ever. Those who have visited the Cave need not be told how much this signifies. It leaves nothing to be desired and little to be said. Mr. Proctor, beside being a faithful and accomplished landlord, is one of the most generous and gallant gentlemen living, and everybody and everything about him reflects his genial qualities. The arrangements of the hotel are organized throughout with great judgment and liberality, and are executed with the utmost fidelity and tact. Nothing, in short, could be more complete or delightful.

The facilities of reaching the Cave are both ample and pleasant. The distance from Louisville is but ninety-five miles, thirty-one of which (soon however to be increased to fifty-two) are traversed by railroad, connecting with daily lines of stages, run by the justly famous contractors, Carter & Thomas, whose stock, coaches, and drivers are not surpassed by any in the Union or out of it. The route to the Cave, moreover, lies through one of the most picthresque and striking regions of the West, forming no mean introduction to the grandeurs that follow.

Of the Cave itself it is unnecessary to speak. As summer dawns, the thoughts of tourists of all ranks and lands turn instinctively to this most strange and fascinating of the world's wonders. And we advise everybody whose thoughts turn in this direction to follow their thoughts as soon as possible, and everybody else to follow after. Certainly Manmoth Cave deserves the reverential devotions of every true lover of the wonderful. Fancy, ve hapless sight-seers who have never explored it, a subterranean realm with cities, palaces, and fanes, with mountainer, valleys, plains, and rivers, with fields and week, with grottoes, bowers, and lakes, with glorious images of sky and stars and mimic traces of all the myriad beauties of the breathing globe. Figure a world shrouded in darkness, yet eclipsing the brightest marvels beneath the sun. Imagine the Alps or the Andes crowned with a material dome to which their imprisoned gems had mounted and were blazing from its ceiling with unimagined splendors. Conceive the fairy mansions of the sea to have risen against the midnight sky, or the star ry firmament itself to have sunk unquenched into ocean's depths. Picture to yourselves, in a word, whatever is most marvellous and grand in reality or myth, and you have some faint idea of what awaits you in the mysterious halls and corridors of Mammoth Cave. The green earth does not cover such another cavern of enchantment. Its glories are indeed perfectly bewildering. They not only beggar description but defy conception. They are at once unique and inconceivable. A tourist of even No paper in this country or in any country is kept moderate pretensious should blush to own that he had never witnessed them.

Many years ago, John Quincy Adams, in the course of a graceful speech delivered while on his first trip to Niagara, said, with that boldness of allusion which frequently characterized his unstudied efforts, that, standing on the threshold of another world, he could not think of going before his Maker solved to publish nothing that a father or mother without having looked upon the most wondrous of need hesitate to read aloud to a danghter all his works on earth! The reflection was startling but not unnatural. It is equally appropriate to the matchless prodigies of Mammoth Cave. Let no swered by the bare statement of the fact that it has one, if he can help it, die without beholding them. And the sooner and the oftener the better.

LARGE FUNERAL .- The funeral procession that attended the remains of Mr. Wm. Atkinson to the grave yesterday, was one of the largest we have ever so in the city. Firemen, Masons, Odd Felcitizens were present honoring their late worthy friend. It was a beautiful tribute to the deceased, and must have been particularly gratifying to his bereaved family.

SETTING BUT ALTERNATION

Examining Courts—The Trial by Jury.—Under the absurd decisions of our Supreme Court, that a juror who has "formed or expressed an opinion" is incompetent, it is very difficult to obtain juries of reading, intelligent men, to try canses of popular notoriety. The reason is, that nearly all men of this class take, or at any rate read, some one or more newspapers. If a murder is committed, or a homecide in just self-defense, the facts and circumstances brought out hefore the examining court being spread before them in the newspapers, are read and commented on feaving to those who do not read, or reading, are incapable of an "opinion," the only portion of the community among whom a panel may be obtained. Hence the looscuess with which the law is executed. Hence the almost farce into which the trial by jury has degenerated.

We have determined, in view to the ends of instice, to abstaln hereafter from thus indirectly aiding in the escape of villains, through prejudice upon the minds of our readers, caused by reporting the testimony on preliminary examinations hefore committing courts. We may fail, thereby, to gratify the appetite of the curious for news, but we shall be in some small degree instrumental in promoting the ends of justice.—Memphis Bulletin.

The Memphis editor has made but a partial state ment of the evil. It is very true, that, where the proceedings of examining courts are published and where newspapers make statements and engage in discussion as to the guilt or innocence of persons indicted for crime, the ignorant men of the community, the people who do not read, must necessarily be the only persons who can legally serve as jurymen, they being the only persons that do not form an opinion; but the evil does not stop here. The publication of testimony and the statement and the argument of a case beforehand at the tribunal of the people are directly calculated not only to put ignorant men upon the jury but perjured villains who are not ignorant. All the reading men of the community will of course form an opinion, and such of them as are honest, will, if interrogated in court, say that they have done so and thus be rejected, but then others, who may be bribed by a rich defendant or by a rich prosecutor, will falsely swear that they have not formed an opinion and so secure themselves a place among the jurors. Hence persons grossly ignorant and persons grossly villainous will almost inevitably constitute the whole

Unquestionably either the practice of publishing the testimony and comments upon the testimony before examining courts should be abandoued by the press, or else the law should be so changed as not to exclude from juries those persons who may have formed opinions from having read such testimony and comments. Probably both these things would be improvements upon the present condition of af-

Miss Delia Bacon, an American writer, has published "The Philosophy of Shakepeare Unfolded," with a preface by Nathauiel Hawthorne. The book, consisting of some 600 pages of royal 800, is only part of what is on hand! The design of the work is to show that, not Shakepeare but Lord Bacon. Sir Waiter staleigh, and other writers might have written what pass as the dramatic and other writings of him whom M. Ponsard, of the Academy of France, speaks of as "the divine Williams." Mr. Hawthorne's preface consists of nine pages (four of which are quotations), declaring that he thinks Miss Bacon writes very well—that it is a perilous thing for her to write against Shakepeare—and that he has not yet read the conclusion of her book, which will contain "historical proofs." In fact, Miss beins Bacon seems to have drawn on Mr. Hawthorne's good nature, for his preface shows that he really did not know what to say.—New York Times.

Some months ago, to the surprise and grief of the judicious, an article conceived in the spirit of the above-mentioned work appeared in l'utnam's Magazine. It was feebly yet earnestly written, and bore very evident and abundant marks of extreme mental caprice. After stating several funciful reasons for believing Shakspeare to be a myth, and hinting unmistakably at Lord Bacon as the possible author of the immortal dramas, it concluded with a promise of historical proofs in subsequent articles, which, to the credit of Putnam, never appeared in its columns, and have not, so far as we know, appeared elsewhere, unless, indeed, they compose Miss Delia Bacon's "Philosophy of Shakspeare Unfolded." It is highly probable that they do.

Miss Bacon is the sister of Dr. Leonard Bacon, of New Haven, one of the ablest and most eloquent divines in New England, and has herself given proof of considerable literary power. She is a protege of Catherine Beecher, who, a few years since, some of our readers may possibly remember, made a not very admirable passage in the life-of her d those who were not. Miss Bacon has w a number of tales for the religious magazines, and not long since delivered a course of historical lectures to private classes of young ladies, after (doubtless some distance after) the manner of the well known conversations of the all-accomplished Margaret Fuller. Miss B. is not by any means deficient in mind or attainments. She, however, is afflicted with incurable whimsicality, and has probably "unfolded" the "Philosophy of Shakspeare" under the mere impulse of vanity kindled by a real or fancied relationship with the great Chancellor whose name she bears. Certainly the undertaking is eminently worthy of such a motive.

INJUSTICE REPELLED. - The Chicago Tribune, offended at something said by the New York Ledger, speaks of that paper as follows:

There is what is denominated the "puppy love" period in the life of juveniles, during which youngsters are infantated after the sort of reading found in the Ledger, and devour it with as much avidity as young robius do worms. The publisher of that sheet understands this peculiar fiedging season in life, and serves up for its appetite a tray of viands compounded of love, assignation, seduction rape, unirder, duels, blood, horror, seusatious, surprises, moonlight, gaslight, and foelight interviews between soft-pated lovers, all of which are spleed and seasoned with a shower of fiery adjectives and intensified verbs, and embellished with crude wood cuts. The animal passions and sensual propensities are the organs which the Ledger stimulates, and plays upon, like a skillful mesmerist.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE .- Probable Murder .- The Corydon (Indiana) Argus says that a negro man at Cedar Branch, some eight miles below Leavenworth, on the Ohio, while out in a skiff the other day, discovered what he supposed to be a barrel of beef floating in the river. He pulled the skiff to the prize and towed it ashore, when becoming impatient to inspect the prize, he knocked one end of the barrel in with his oar, which revealed a sight that made him recoil with horror. The cask contained the body of a man with the head cleft in two to the neck. The body was stark naked, and had evidently been entombed but a few days.

To the Editors of the Lousville Journal:

GENTLEMEN: While I was speculating as to the handsome present made to Bishop Smith during his recent voyage to England, mention of which was given in your Journal and said to have been repeated in the Eastern papers, the following account then from the Church Witness, reached me:

"Bishop Smith officiated twice as chaplain during his recent trip to Liverpool in the Niagara, and gave, on three occasions, lectures on art. We see glad to learn that his services were so highly appreciated by the passengers that they presented him with a purse of nearly $500."

This gives the exact facts, and, although it does

This gives the exact facts, and, although it dee This gives the exact facts, and, although it does not satisfy every inclination to know the particular, it affords us the equally great satisfaction of knowing that, even upon the sea, our worthy Bishop showed himself to be the same active, useful prelative which he has ever been at home. Happy is he wan, when the pulpit or the forum is left behind, can turn to the objects which surround him, from the turn to the objects which surround him, from the turn to draw confidence for his own heart and knowledge for the minds of others; who can be eloquent amide the noise of many waters as well as on dry land, with the lower depths around him, can point to the sublimer upper depths and show the works which revolve therein.

l can say little to convey an adequate idea of the pleasure which these lectures must have given to his fellow-travelers. Lectures in the city are attended as the whim seizes us, but, at sea, where the day's scenes and faces and looks are those of yesterday, variety becomes a necessity, conversation is the only relief, and even a passing smile turns out to be invortant; but if one stands we to address. the only relief, and even a passing smile turns out to be important; but if one stands up to address us on themes which require learning to master and taste to present in a judicions form, our pleasure surpasses our approval, and our gratitude extends beyond any return. Yet surely, if we would be true to the pleasure we are experiencing, we cannot do less than offer some return. The lecturer, on his part, cannot refuse the expression of approval without being limited to the imputation of setting too high a value on his performances.

ble to the imputation of setting the setting that all this performances.

Your readers will be gratified to learn that all this took place on board the Niagara, and will join with me in hoping for the sake of those who then may be his fellow-travelers that the Bishop on his return may be induced to repeat his lectures—an numerally modest way in this brazen-faced day for a learned gentleman to surround himself with an audience.

Yours, very truly,

THE FINAL ARCTIC SEARCH.—The vessel selected by Lady Franklin for this enterprise is a screw steam yacht, the Fox, schooner-rigged, diagonally planked, built for the late Sir Richard Sutton, and now lying at Aberdeen. This vessel is to be strengthened for the service she is to enter upou and at once got ready for sea.

She sails about the last of June, and will be commanded by Captain McClintock, of the Royal Navy, who has already conducted one expedition in search of Sir John Franklin.

It is stated on good authority that the extent of coast line which has been already traversed by the searching expeditions of the British government is 6,500 miles. There remains to be explored only 370 miles. Professor Haughton (of the Royal Irish Academy) says that an expedition consisting of 100 persons might be expected to traverse from 7,000 to 10.000 miles in sledges in a single year.

It is proposed by Capt. McClintock to make his way down Prince Regent's Inlet, and thence through Bellot's Strait, into the field of search; or to attack it directly, if he deems the state of the ice to justify the step, by going down Peel Sound, which he has good reason to believe to be a Strait. If the ice will permit him to pass through Bellot's Strait or go down Peel's Sound, he will abandon the idea of taking his ship through the conjectured Northwest Passage, and, leaving her in safety in Prince Rcgent's Inlet, will proceed to make the search for the missing ships, Erebus and Terror, by sledding CROSSING THE PLAINS .- We learn from the Greenfield (Mo). Sonthwester that emigration to California is greatly on the increase in that part of the State-never before having been greater, if equalled, unless in the years 1851-52. As many as twenty wagons a week have passed through Greenfield, this spring, bound for California; and it is thought that seven thousand head of cattle have gone from that county, and twice as many from Greene.

More Murders by the Indians .- The Henderson Democrat, of the 4th, learns from the Sioux agency that one of the two friendly Indians sent out by Agent Flandrau to purchase the two remaining female captives of the hostile Indians has been murdered by those rascals and all their goods taken possession of! One of the Indians escaped to tell of the result of the expedition.

The Maquoketa Excelsior says the mob which broke open the jail at DeWitt, Iowa, and took out Barger and hung him, was led by H. K. Landis, postmaster at Iron Hill, Jackson county, who adjusted the rope at the execution. E. Mason, justice of the peace, was a prominent figure in the mob.

SHOOTING BUFFALOES WITH PEPPERCORNS. There is that in a right spicy contest of any sort which warms the blood. Be it a hand to hand encounter with fists, claymores, or clubs, pistols or blunderbusses, or a war of words, or simply a conflict of political opponents, it certainly does create a fresh glow about the gills of the heart, be the symmethies of the locker on what they may But the pathies of the looker on what they may. But the weapon must be proportionate to the game, and the ahooting of grizzlies with duck shot, or of buffaloes with paper pellets, or of whales with carpet tacks, are all proceedings only to be laughed at.

Paul II. Dennis, local mail agent in this city, has just been out on a hunt after the largest species of game with not what we believe and certainly what has not proved the best chosen kind of ammunition.

The Mayor in all his length was np before Judge

Drimmond yesterday, upon a complaint preferred by the sharp set mail ugent, for stealing the Govern-ment mail bags! There had been a search warran', their peaceful agricultural products and brought to town by the local mail agent, to be turned to dann-ing proof against the ex-M. C. The sacks in question were the coarse duck sack, or bag, used for the transmission of "Pub. Doc's" to members of Congress, in which capacity Long John had received some dozen or more of them. It was shown in evidence that M. C.'s never returned these sacks. That Judge Douglas never had returned them in any case; that they passed by common acceptance as envelopes, and were not mail bags at all.

Thus "bang" went Mr. Dennis's gun, and not a feather was disturbed. The Mayor came off with him to bail. The court room was crowded with spectators, and the farce was a taking one. Chicago Press, June 10.

Mr. Paul H. Dennis had better attend to the dnties of his office than attempts to manufacture capital against political opponents.

MOB LAW AT FLORENCE, N. T .- The Davenport Gazette is indebted to a friend for the following extract from a letter dated Florence, Nebraska, May 26, and written by Mr. T. McGarvran, formerly a resident of Davenport:

We have had a very exciting time here to-day, ome six or seven men were arrested for claim imping. One o'clock this evening was the time pointed for trial, and the whole town was presented. The prisoners were brought up tied togeth-tried by the club association and condemned. ath was the penalty. Ropes were procured, and I thought for sometime they were sure to be hung according to sentence, and I now think that had it not been for an old gray-headed father pleading for his son and sons-in-law, and the tears of their wives and sisters they would have been hung. A number of speeches were made in favor of death, but the final result was, three were set free on condition that they would do right and be honest in future, confessing their fault and releasing their right to The other four were sent across the riv er accompanied by 150 men, with a resolution that if they ever set foot again on Nebraska soil they communicates the following: By the latest arrivals from Venezuela we have re ceived the particulars of a most singular and extra By the latest arrivals from Venezuela we have re ceived the particulars of a most singular and extra ordinary occurrence, which has lately transpired i Caracas, and which has caused a good deal of feeling among the native population, but still more among the Protestants, and especially the English residents. From the high official position of one of the chief parties, the papers have kept silence on the subject, the only mention of it being an article inserted under the head of "communicados," (articles subject, the only licition of the day and the head of "communicados," (articles communicated), and which was signed by "Unos Protestantes." The occurrence was no less than the union of a step-father to the daughter of his the union of a step-rather to the daughter of his lately deceased wife. The point that more especially touched the English residents was, that the ceremony was performed by the British Charge d'Affaires, and at the office of the British legation. From our correspondence and the papers published there we gather the following as the facts of the case:

Dr. Ciego Bantista Urbaneja, a lawyer of high standing in Caracas, married, some years ago, a widow lady, who had several children by her first husband. Little more than eighteen months ago she died, and at the time of her decease one of her daughters was fully grown. This daughter soon became the object of her step-father's desire, and in twelve months after the death of the wife and mother it was rumored that the gentleman in question was auxious, if possible, to marry his step-daughter. The ecclesiastical law among the Catholics has ever been, on such subjects, more stringent than among Protestants, although dispensations are frequently given for particular cases. The Archbishop of Ven-Protestants, although dispensations are requestry given for particular cases. The Archbishop of Venezuela was applied to for one in the case in question, but an unhesitating refusal given. It is reported that application was then made to the Pope, but with the same result. Efforts were then made to see whether the ceremony would be solemnized in Curacca, under the Datch Government, but unsuccessible considerations of the other West India Islands. ally, as in some of the other West India Islands. In the last resort, and after every exertion else the last resort, and after every exertion else-where had been made, application was made to Mr. Bingbam, her British Majesty's charge d'affaires— English ministers and consuls, resident in foreign countries, being authorized to solemnize the mar-riage rite, after the form of the Church of England, where one or both of the parties are British subjects. In the present case the father of the intended wif was an Englishman, though her mother was a na-tive. Mr. Bingham found no difficulty in uniting them, and the sucred rite was performed by him. The enormity of such a connection was only equalied by the conduct of the high functionary who offi-ciated at the ceremony—a ceremony which attempt-ed to justify a union which the whole civilized world y common consent, regards as scarcely less

The above are the main features of the case The Catholic population are not a little excited about it, and the Protestant still more. The former are loud in their denunciations, while the latter feel it the more keenly, as the parties are both Catholics, who had applied in vain to their own authorities and their own church; after failing to have it ties and their own church; after failing to have it sanctioned there, they applied to a Protestant Charge d'Affaires. They are now subject to the taunts of the native population as sanctioning such an unholy alliance. The case is somewhat aggravated by the fact that the ceremony was performed by the British Charge. Were it merely by a private mau or clergyman, the act could be treated as an individual misdemeanor by a man unfit for his calling, but the high official position of one of the chief actors puts a different aspect on the matter. chief actors puts a different aspect on the matter. The Protestant residents there have done all they could to disavow any sanction of such a marriage, and have made a public protest through the press. Mr. Bingham, the Charge d'Affaires, is the brother of the Earl of Lucan, of Crimean notoriety.

HOFFMAN, THE NOVELIST .- The editor of the Pittsburg Journal writes to his paper a description of a visit to the Pennsylvania Insane Asylum, at Harrisburg. Among the inmates is Charles Fenno Hoffman, the novelist, his interview with whom he describes as follows:

I return for a moment to the men's wards. Loit-I return for a moment to the men's wards. Loitering behind my companions, I found Dr. Curweit formally introducing them to a patient who had just emerged from his chamber. He is a tall, spare man, moving heavily, with a shuffling halt of the right leg, and supporting himself with a canc. A mass of long, black hair droops in disorder over a noble forehead; the eye is dark and deep, and sweeps over the visitors with a quiet power, altogether unlike madness. The nose is large, somewhat irregular in outline, but finely cut about the nostril, which is expanded and rounded with grace and strength, indicative of talent, if not of genius.

He remembered an excursion in the saddle over Coal Hill, which he shared with some eight or nine young people, and of which he made brief mention in his book of personal adventure published soon after. I tried his memory by reproducing a compliment he had there recorded of a spirited young lady who was of the party. "Georgian lay a pair of who was of the party: "accompanied by a pair of queen-like eyes." His countenance grew radiant with a positively sweet smile as he ejaculated, "Ah, yes, Miss S.—. How is Miss S.—?" I did not tell him he forgot that was twenty-four years ago, but evaded reply. I might have told him that Miss S. had been a wife aud mother tweuty years ago, and has long since passed away. I might have told him that, tof the eight or nine young people who composed that gay and happy party, but two are now alive, and one of them in a mad-house, the other feeble, infirm, and almost an old man. "Alas for time and death and care, what shadows o'er our path ye fling." But I did not. Let him cherish path ye fling," But I did not. Let him cherish his pleasant delusion. Indulging the trick of his memory, which is a blank as to recent events, but memory, which is a blank as to recent events, but singularly faithful as to the far Past, I allowed him, unchecked, to send his respectful regards to Miss S. to Mr. W. R., and others who are in their graves.

"This is Charles Fenno Hoffman, the single 'author' of the inelancholy household! His disease is of peculiar form, and, Dr. Curwen tells me, presents the only instance he ever met with of hallucities of the control o nation of five senses—touch, taste, sight, smell, and hearing. The most distressing indications of his disease are exhibited in his fancies that somebody is touching, or pressing, or pinching him; or that he sees persons or objects which trouble and disturb A trace of the aberration is apparent in his reminding me that our last meeting was many more than sixteen years ago, and with sudden turn for getting the lapse of time, to make a polite inquiry after a young lady's health, as if he had parted with her but yesterday. The casual visitor will fail to detect traces of insanity in Mr. Hoffman, but will ordiuarily be pleasantly impressed by his elaborate politeness and courtly demeanor. His intervals of perfect tranquillity are rare, but he is as rarely much excited, and never violent. I hear with great regret that there is almost no hope of any permanent improvement in the case of Mr. Hoffman, and that best expectation for him can reach no higher than that he may long survive, bathed in pleasant delusions of the memory, to do the honors of the louse, and sadly to remind the visitor that between ering intellect and helpless insanity there is but a thin partition, which a breath may abrade, or a blow destroy and break down forever!

A correspondent of the l'etersburg, Va., Exress, writing from Murfreesboro', N. C., says:

Moneyed men in the lower counties have been greatly alarmed by the reported failure of the late cashier of the Farmers' Bank of Elizabeth city, and his failure may affect the bank very injuriously. There is a great run with these bills, and general distrust. His liabilities, it is thought, will not exceed $95,000, and if so the results will not be so disastrous as some will imagine, as his assets are estimated at least $100,000.

There is now lying at the foot of Pine street, East river, a small yacht, with the pretty and historical name of Charter Oak. She is sloop rig, and her lines, judging from the way she aits on the water, are everything that could be desired to insure speed and bearing. The Charter Oak is now taking stores on board, the owner having determined to start for Liverpool in the conrse of next week. This is an undertaking of great daring, as the vessel is only of 23 tons burden. The canvas consists of mainsail, jib, flying jib, gaff topsail, squaresail and studding-sail—spreading in all nine hundred yards. The hull is built of white oak timbers and fame, with hacmatack knees; the deck is of white pine and the ceiling yellow pine.—N. Y. Herald. There is now lying at the foot of Pine street, East

[For the Louisville Bulletin. PROSPECT FOR CROPS.

Messas. Editors: Seeing in your recent issues notices of the prospect for crops in different sections of the country, I have concluded to give you some items in reference to the prospect in this region of country, uear the Kentucky line. The spring here, as almost every where I have heard from, has been at least a month later than u.ual, or in ordinary years; and the month of April was throughout the coldest I have any recollection of ever experiencing, and I am now in my 51st year. Indeed, it was a real winter month in temperature; and at the close of it the trees and vegetation presented almost as bare au aspect as in mid winter. But the farmers had one advantage, and an important one, that they were in a great measure deprived of last yeargood, dry weather in which to prepare their land for their crops; and good preparation is "half the battle" in making a crop. But owing to the continued cold weather, they have had great difficulty in obtaining a stand of corn. Almost every field had to be planted over the second time, and some I think the third time! HENRY Co., Tenn., June 1, 1857.

They have sncceeded, however, in getting a good stand at last. The prospect for the when and out crops is fine, particularly the latter; and, if the season continues propitious, there must be at least an son continues propitious, there must be at least an average crop of these made, if not more. There is a prospect for a sufficiency of tobacco plants, but they are late and small and but very little has as yet been planted. If we can have a late fall, the crops of corn and tobacco will no doubt be fine; and there will doubtless be an unusually late fall. Do you ask me my reasons for so saying? I reply, the predictions in the Western Farmers' Almanas, published by Messrs. Morton & Griswold, of your city. The weather calculations in that are made according to "Herschel's weather table," and I have procured their Almanac for a number of years and noticed closely their weather predictions and have found them to fail but very seldom. According to that, we are now having very rainy and somewhat cool weather and it will continue to be such until towards 20th of the month, when the weather will become esttled, dry and warm, to be soon succeeded, how-ever, by showers again. Mark the predictions! Owing to the bad crops of last year, corn and provender of all kinds have become extremely scarce; in fact, there is hardly any to be had in the country. Many farmers exhausted their supplies before the winter was over, and soon after the spring months (not spring weather, however) commenced; and the consequence has been that many cattle and hogs have died from starvation, as they could not obtain food to keep them alive. Some farmers having large flocks of cattle have lost nearly all. I am acquainted with one man who, out of a flock of twenty lost all but two.

We have fine growing weather now, and have had for a week or two past; and I do not remember ever to have seen vegetation put forth so rapidly. The failure of crops for two years, almost in succession, should teach the farmers a lesson by which to profit in their arrangements, calculations, and expectations. In order to insure a sufficient supply of ficed. lost all but two. in their arrangements, calculations, and expecta-tions. In order to insure a sufficient supply of food for their stock, particularly on the contingency of such winters as the two past, and such a late spring as the one just passed, they will have to make more hay, and resort to other crops for the purpose than those usually relied on by them. And I know of no crop that promises to be so well adapted for this pur-pose, and that can be so successfully raised, as the sorphum or Chinese sugar cane, as it can be made to orghum or Chinese sugar cane, as it can be made to produce two crops of jodder in the same season, and that of the best kind. The great quantity, too, which it will yield to the acre (sex to eight tons) commends it to their attention. Let them give it a fair

A STRANGE OCCURRENCE.-By a letter from F S. Murphy, Esq., of Geneva, to his brother in this place, we are put in possession of the following facts, place, we are put in possession of the following facts, regarding a most singular occurrence that happened a few days ago in the vicinity of Geneva. The letter is dated May 29, 1857, and says: "A very strange occurrence took place this morning, a short distance out of town, which has alarmed and excited the whole neighborhood. A family by the name of Daignen, living about one mile south of this village, on the skirts of the Geneva Woods, had their child about two years old taken from the very threshold of their dwelling, by a large and ferocious looking animal, which immediately made off to the woods, and, before the screams of the mother had caused it to drop its prey, had carried the child a caused it to drop its prey, had carried the child a

This is the second time it has appeared and taken the same child. Tuesday morning it came out of the woods and took the same child from the door-yard, and, in spite of the efforts of the family, succeeded in carrying it about sixty rods into the woods before it relinquished its burden. It is not definite ly known what kind of animal it is that thus boldly intrudes on the rights of its human neighbors, intrudes on the rights of its numan heighbors, but from the description given by the terrified family it is thought to be a bear. A large party of men have been on the hunt for it for the past two days, but thus far without success. They express their deter-mination, however, to capture it if it remains in this part of the country.

This circumstance reminds one strongly of "frontier life." The auimal has been seen several times this spring by persons at a distance.—Wisconsin Ex.

STRONG WORDS.—General Sir Charles James Napier, brother of the military historian, made the following entry in his "Journal," under date of January 30th, 1840, the auniversary of the execu-January 30th, 1840, the auniversary of the execution of Charles I: "This day, my great, great, great grandfather, Charles the First, was be-nobbed! and well he deserved it; he was as jesuitical, hypocritical rascal as ever wore a crown. He died with pluck, because he was in his right place, on a scaffold!—not the right place as a king, but as a man. God rest his soul, but he was a bad king, a bad sol-dier, and a bad man." Rather strong language to use about one's ancestor, and that ancestor a king. On the 7th of December, same year, the General made this note in his "Journal:" "Napoleon's remains have reached the Seine, and are honored as the hero deserves to be honored. The stain inflicted the hero deserves to be honored. The stain inflicted on England by the murderers of Napoleon can never be washed away; of all the base, cowardly actions committed by a nation, or rather the rulers of a nation, the sending of Napoleon to St. Helena is the most disgusting and the most impolitic." Such was the opinion of a man who fought bravely against Napoleon, and such is the opinion of all decent people.

Singular Effects of Electricity. — A singular occurrence took place a short time since at the Locomotive Works, illustrating the powerful effects of electricity. A locomotive was being removed from the manufactory to the Central depot, and had arrived in the middle of the street, when suddenly all hands drooped the bars with which they were moving the machine, and fell back in amazement. Resuming them at the order of the man in charge, they applied them again to the wheels, and again fell back paralysed, the instant they touched the iron. The director of the job caught up one of the bars, and making a savage thrust, planted it under a wheel, preparatory to giving a huge lift. No sooner had it touched, however, than he saw it fall from his grasp to the ground, as it had done in every case before. Such singular occurrences excited attenbefore. Such singular occurrences excited atten-tion, and an examination was made as to the cause, when it was found that the locomotive in passing under the was round that the locomotive in passing under the telegraph line, had come in contact with a broken wire that lung sufficiently low to reach it. The whole mass of iron composing the locomotive had thus become charged with electricity, which had compuniously itself to the hear that the had thus become charged with electricity, which had communicated itself to the bars that the mer held in their hands, and caused the effect above described. The wire was then removed, and the difficulty obviated in a moment.—Detroit Free Press.

To the afflicted in speech, to the afflicted in hearing, to the afflicted with chronic diseases of any kind, and to those who have been so unfortunate as to loose an eye. We are requested to make it known to the public that the successful Dr. Jones, of Philadelphia, has been urged by many persons that have been under his treatment) to remain at the Galt House two weeks longer, that they may have a chance to send their friends to him for that relief which is said cannot be had from any other source; and owing also to the many kind requests of warm friends that he has made here, and in consideration of the good he may do, he has consented to continue practicing at the Galt House until the 24th of this

Mozart Hall was crowded last evening, by the elite of the city-the attraction being the splendid Strawberry and Floral Festival gotten np by the ladies of the Episcopal Church of this city, for the benefit of St. John's Free Church. We have never seen more beantiful and appropriate arrangements at any time. The center floral bower is in exquisite taste, and surmounts the finest assortment and choicest of rare flowers. This alone is worth going to see, but when in connection with the music of one of the finest city bands, beautiful ladies, and palatable temptations, who can resist? The festival will continue to-night.

All those who wish to join the Cade of this city will please call this (Thursday) evening, at 8 o'clock precisely, at the Mayor's office. A full attendance is requested.

FEYER AND AGUE.—A case of eight months' standlng cured by Burhave's Holland Butters.—Michael Kelly, No. 117 Seventh, near Grant street, says:
Last July, while running on the river on a cotton boat plying between Natchez and New Orleans, I was taken with Fever and Ague. For eight long months I suffered with this dreadful disease. The greater part of this time I was unable to work, and spent at least fifty dollars for different medicines, but found no permanent relief. Three weeks ago, but found no permanent relief. Three weeks ago, one of my friends insisted upon my trying Bærhave's Holland Bitters, saying that a cure was guaranteed. After taking it for one week, I must state, I was a sound man. I have been at work now for two weeks and have had no return of the Chills and Fever

I certify that the above statement is true.
